MAJOR THREATS SHAPING THE SECURITY LANDSCAPE IN 2021

April 29, 2021

3:00 PM-4:15 PM

Eastern Standard Time (EST)

Join us for a conversation of the major threats shaping the security landscape in 2021. The SolarWinds attacks that came to light in December of 2020 was a wake-up call for many organizations with regard to software supply chain attacks. While this was far from the first attack of this type, it's widespread impact has forced many to reconsider how they architect their networks and monitor their systems for potential compromise. The COVID-19 pandemic also forced many organizations to change how they operate in 2020, which we expect will lead to new security challenges in 2021. A rapid acceleration of transitions to the public cloud happened in many organizations, but not always with secure configuration in mind. Attackers are poised to take advantage of this oversight in 2021. Additionally, as the pandemic (hopefully) winds down throughout 2021, there will be new opportunities for attackers based on changes in user behavior and government policies that organizations should prepare for.
